Yesterday, I attended the open house at Charles Barrett's to prepare for my son's enrollment in kindergarten this fall. During our discussion with the school administration team, we were advised to consider enrolling at a different school outside our designated area because of the frequent malfunctioning of the elevator. This poses an issue regarding compliance with ADA federal regulations. If repeated issues with the elevator significantly impact students' accessibility within the school, it becomes a matter of equality and discrimination that needs addressing by the school board.
